VALE GUITEAU!

The Curtain Falls on the Last Act in our National Tragedy.

GARFIELD'S MURDERER MAKES HIS EXIT BY THE HANGMAN'S ROPE

No More the Land will be Disgraced by the Presence of Guiteau. He has Gone to Meet his Master in the Fiery Depths Below.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

WASHINGTON, June 29.—Chas H. Reed [illegible] Guiteau said to-day: "I have seen nothing as yet to shake my conviction that Guiteau will die tomorrow without weakness or faltering. His bravado is not that of an ordinary criminal or a born ruffian who takes pride in his crime. It is rather that of a martyr, of a man who suffers and dies for the sake of some religious principle. I thought at one time he was beginning to weaken. I saw in a newspaper that a spiritual adviser had been called in and the thought occurred to me that perhaps Guiteau had begun to realize his guilt, admitted a crime and needed divine forgiveness and that he wished to make preparation for death. The next time I saw him I said:

'Charles, I saw by the newspapers that you have called in a minister. Do you feel as if you needed to prepare for death? Do you repent of what you have done?'

He looked at me with a wild expression in his eyes and shouted: 'No, I haven't called in any minister. I haven't done anything wrong. The minister came of his own accord. I didn't send for him.'

Two or three days afterwards I was introduced to Dr. Hicks, whom I never had previously met, and I said to him: 'Doctor, has Guiteau ever shown in his talk with you any consciousness of having done wrong, any feeling of repentance or desire for forgiveness?'

'None whatever,' he replied. 'He has maintained consistently the idea that he has done no wrong; that he has simply done God's service and has nothing to repent of.'

Up to the present moment [illegible] Guiteau has talked of his faith without any manifestation whatever of fear of death.

He said to me to-day: 'Mr. Reed, what are you going to do with my body?'

I told him that was a very painful subject to talk about and that I would rather not go into that, but that he might be assured his body would be properly cared for.

He said: '[illegible] are particularly what is done with it so long as it is not used for gain.'

I assured him again his body should not be used for any mercenary purpose.

'What do you mean by that?' he inquired.

I explained to him the meaning of mercenary, and he said: 'That's all right; perhaps that is the better word. I don't want my body to be used for gain.'" In handing Reed [illegible] a farewell letter which he wrote just before bidding him goodby, Guiteau said: "This, my best friend, is the only compensation I can give you for your services to me. You have never lied to me nor deceived me while nearly everybody else has. I am going to heaven tomorrow at 10 o'clock, and I wish you were going with me."

An Interview with the Jailer.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Washington special: Deputy Warden Rush was asked to-day how Guiteau deported himself. He said: "The man is as happy as a child; he wants to see nobody but Hicks and sends to nobody. Guards are not allowed to speak to him, and he never speaks to them."

Does he sleep well?

Yes. He goes to sleep about nine or ten o'clock at night and sleeps like a child till after daylight in the morning. He sleeps quietly without any tossing around, or muttering, or waking.

What does he eat?

We give him just what he wants. About 8 o'clock he orders his breakfast. He calls for beefsteak, fried potatoes, fried eggs, rolls and coffee. He eats heartily and is an epicure in his diet. He wants his food nicely prepared and delicately served. At 12 o'clock, noon, he calls for his lunch and it is served always three poached eggs and a cup of coffee. At 4 o'clock he dines and his dinner is just like his lunch, three poached eggs on toast and coffee, his meal being cut up for him.

Don't you give him a knife and fork?

No. No knife and fork.

Nor spoon?

No. Nor spoon.

How does he eat then?

With his fingers.

Why don't you give him a knife and fork?

There is no telling what a man under sentence of death will do. The more quiet a man, the closer he has to be watched. It is astonishing to what devices they will resort to kill themselves, even in spite of the sharpest watch. Guiteau might take it into his head to kill himself and he always acts on the spur of the moment.

This man has given a world of trouble for the past year?

The well meaning officer heaved a deep sigh as much as to say: "I wish he was gone." But he did not make any unofficerlike observations.

What has the man actually in his possession was asked?

"Only his bible," was the reply.

Has he nothing then with which he could kill himself?

Oh yes, he could kill himself in fifteen minutes if he was not watched, provided he so desired. He could hang himself with his sheet or his suspenders or his handkerchief. No; the only way to do is to watch a man who is under sentence.

Still you say he appears happy and satisfied?

Yes, but it don't do to trust a man under such circumstances. He might change his mind.

The Only Exhibition of Tenderness.

While a reporter was in the cell in the afternoon, an attendant came in and presented Guiteau with a large and beautiful bouquet.

"Where did that come from?" asked prisoner.

"From your sister," the guard replied.

Guiteau pressed it to his lips and wept bitterly for a few moments and then suddenly conquered his emotion, and exclaimed: "This does not become a man who is about to meet his God for doing God's will."

This was the only exhibition of tenderness that he had given.

His Will.

At his suggestion and dictation of Reed he then drew up his will, in form of a letter, as follows:

WASHINGTON, June 29, 1881.

To Rev. Wm. A. Hicks—I, Charles J. Guiteau, of the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, now under sentence of death, which is to be carried into execution between the hours of 12 and 2 o'clock on the 30th day of June, A. D., 1882, in the United States jail in said district, do hereby give and grant you my body after such execution, provided however, it shall not be used for any mercenary purpose and I hereby for good and sufficient considerations give, deliver and transfer to said Hicks my book entitled "The Truth and Removal," and copyright thereof, to be used by him in writing a truthful history of my life and execution, and I direct that such history be entitled "The Life and Work of Chas. J. Guiteau," and I hereby solemnly proclaim and announce to all the world that no person or persons shall ever in any way use my body for any mercenary purpose whatsoever and if at any time hereafter any persons shall desire to honor my remains, they can do it by erecting a monument, whereon shall be inscribed these words: "Here lies the body of Charles J. Guiteau, Patriot and Christian. His soul is in glory."

CHARLES J. GUITEAU.

Witness, { CHAS. H. REED,
JAS. WOODWARD.

Reed also drew up the following paper at Guiteau's request, which was presented to Warden Crocker:

To Gen. Jno. J. Crocker, Warden U. S. Jail:

We, Frances M. Scoville and Jno. W. Guiteau, sister and brother and only heirs of Charles J. Guiteau, to be executed on the 30th day of June 1882, in the United States jail in the District of Columbia, hereby request you to deliver the body of said Chas. J. Guiteau to Rev. Wm. Hicks after such execution. Signed,

Parting with his Counsel and Relatives.

Guiteau thanked Reed for his efforts in his behalf and becoming greatly excited he exclaimed:

"As for President Arthur, he is a coward and an ingrate, and he will be punished hereafter."

Reed started to go when Guiteau said: "Wait one moment. I mean to say something more."

He then sat down at a table and, in a firm bold hand, wrote the following and handed it to Reed, who came from the cell deeply affected by the interview:

"To my dear friend Chas. H. Reed:—I am only too glad to express to you my unbounded appreciation of your services in my behalf. You did splendidly. May God reward you for it. Meet me in heaven.

[Signed] CHAS. J. GUITEAU.
U. S. Jail, Washington, June 28, 1882."

Dr. Hicks remained about 15 minutes longer with the prisoner. But was unable to turn his thoughts away from consideration of his immediate surroundings. When he retired from the cell Mrs. Scoville and her little daughter and John W. Guiteau were admitted. Their interview with prisoner lasted 15 minutes, the warden and deputy being present. Guiteau was at first much excited and roundly abused the priest and those "wretches," as he termed them, who had hounded him to the scaffold, and "you too," he cried out, pointing his finger at Gen. Crocker and the deputy, "you will be both sent to hell." In a few minutes he calmed down and said he was ready to die and [illegible] o'clock sharp.

At parting he said: "Let me kiss my sister through the grated bars," and [illegible]. After kissing his sister and little niece he turned to his brother and handing him a [illegible] said: "Here is the ten cents due my washerwoman. I guess you had better settle that balance. [illegible]"

WASHINGTON, June [illegible]

[illegible] the latter part [illegible] breakfast [illegible] saw the prisoner again when he asked me [illegible] and see the scaffold. Guiteau: "I wish I could arrange with the warden to have the trap sprung as soon as possible." He expressed [illegible] miserable anxiety lest some accident should occur and insisted that Hicks should see that the scaffold and its appurtenances were all in proper condition. After Guiteau had disposed of these matters he read a poem composed by himself, which he calls "Simplicity, or Religious Baby Talk." After reading the above he attempted to sing it but broke down in the effort. Guiteau then talked for a while about the future. He remarked that his heart was tender. "I don't think," he said, "I can go through this ordeal without weeping, [illegible] weakness [illegible] but because I am nearer the other world. I hold to the idea that God inspired me."

Guiteau subsequently asked that in his books all complimentary remarks about President Arthur and his administration be eliminated. [illegible] He told Hicks that he wanted him to offer the first prayer on the scaffold, saying he (Guiteau) would then read his favorite scriptural passage, the tenth chapter of [illegible], then a prayer of his own [illegible]. Then he intended he said to read his poem "Simplicity." [illegible] arranged that just as he uttered the last word the trap should be sprung.

John W. Guiteau arrived at the jail at [illegible] and was followed in a few minutes by Warden Crocker [illegible] two gentlemen with Hicks. [illegible] the prisoner came [illegible] for 15 minutes. He walked very briskly [illegible] rather difficult for the guard [illegible] him.

Reporters Take Possession.

At 10 o'clock there was a large crowd of newspaper correspondents waiting at the gate leading into Guiteau's corridor, but they could see nothing but the wooden door behind which Guiteau's cell [illegible] view. Now and then the guard appeared at the door and sent a messenger to the warden. At all times those at the gate [illegible] a view of the table, corridor and chair on which the death watch sat after Guiteau had finished copying.

10 A. M.—The office of the jail has been given completely up to reporters [illegible] night. The private office of the warden has been transferred temporarily into the telegraph office. At 9 o'clock there was a constant stream of persons coming into the jail. The scene outside was like that of some great occasion. An enterprising colored man had erected booths from which refreshments could be obtained by the weary and thirsty people. Mounted messengers are speeding to and from the city, and [illegible] are bringing visitors to the jail. At 10 o'clock Guiteau expressed a desire to take a bath. No one but the deathwatch was with him. It was quite apparent that his object in bathing was simply to distract his thoughts from approaching death. He evinced increased nervousness and his sudden movements, manner and marked tremor in his tones when he attempted to speak impressed the guard that he was rapidly weakening.

The rotunda was thrown open at 10 o'clock and newspaper men at once flocked in. There were few other people there except the jail guard and a squad of artillery men, who looked down on the scene in sight of the steps leading to the scaffold. Early this morning prisoners in that part of the jail looking on the court where the gallows stands were all removed to other quarters and locked in cells. At 9 o'clock this morning jail officers had a rehearsal of the part they are to play in the execution for the purpose chiefly of testing the appliances of the gallows. A bag of sand weighing 160 pounds was attached to a noose and the trap was sprung by means of a trigger rope which was pushed into one of the cells of the north wing.

Inspecting the Scaffold.

The scaffold stood the test well. At 10 o'clock Dr. Hicks and John Guiteau went with Crocker to the scaffold together with a number of guards. John W. Guiteau ascended the steps and carefully examined the structure, handling and inspecting all fixtures both above and below the platform.

Details of Scenes at the Jail.

At 10 o'clock seven policemen arrived at the jail and were posted along the roadway outside the building in addition to the regular jail guard. All available men of battery C, 2d U. S. artillery are now on duty outside the jail. Shortly before 11 o'clock Guiteau called for paper and for twenty minutes busied himself in making a copy of what he terms "His prayer on the scaffold." As his hands will be pinioned, Dr. Hicks will hold the manuscript while Guiteau reads. Now that he is employed he appears much calmer and is rapidly completing his work, writing in a large, round and legible hand. Preparations for the execution are being made. Guiteau has had a bath, dressed and ate his dinner which was served at 11 o'clock. Dr. Hicks is with him. He says he will die game. He began to arrange his dress, putting on a pair of navy blue trousers.

At 11:30 the guard came out of the door and said: "He is ready for Dr. Hicks now, and wants the flowers to come."

Another guard who took the message hurried off and soon returned with Hicks, who went into the cell. Guiteau was then reported by the guard to be apparently very composed. Guiteau's message about the flowers referred to his expectation that Mrs. Scoville would send some flowers to him, but none had arrived at the time he asked for them.

At 11 o'clock Dr. A. E. McDonald of New York and Dr. Francis Loring of this city, expert witnesses at the trial of Guiteau, arrived at the jail. Dr. McDonald said as he understood it the autopsy would be performed by three physicians agreed upon by the friends of the condemned man and afterward the brain would be removed for further examination. The three physicians selected to perform the autopsy are Dr. Lamb, who made the autopsy of President Garfield, Dr. Sowers and Dr. Hartington, deputy coroner of this city. Dr. Loring expects to make a thorough examination of the prisoner's eyes.

Mrs. Scoville Creates a Scene.

At 11 A. M. Mrs. Scoville, Guiteau's sister, who had said yesterday that she would not come to see the hanging, appeared at the jail door and demanded to be admitted. The warden knowing that her presence at the execution would certainly cause a scene, had given orders that she be not admitted. The guards told her that she could not enter, and the woman first begged to be admitted and then denounced the officials for their brutal conduct. John Guiteau was sent for. After a short conference with Crocker John W. Guiteau went outside the jail to see his sister. He found her in great excitement bordering upon hysteria, but after a short time he succeeded in calming her and dissuading her from any attempts to witness the execution. She acknowledged the propriety of such a course, but said that she could not possibly remain in the city during all the wretched hours of morning. She brought with her flowers which Guiteau asked for and they were taken to the prisoner. Mrs. Scoville also brought two handsome flower pieces, a cross and an anchor, which she will place upon her brother's coffin with her own hands.

Guiteau has not been informed of Mrs. Scoville's presence and even if he was aware that she is here it is believed he would not desire to have her present. His greatest desire now seems to be that there shall be no scene, and his programme shall be carried out without any interruption or incident to distract him from the heroic picture which he believes he is about to present.

His Last Requests.

11:35 A. M.—While Dr. Hicks was in the prisoner's cell at 11 o'clock Guiteau made some requests. As the executioner and hangman had made copies of his "Last Prayer" poem and other writings, he tore up the originals. He then sent for the jail bootblack and gave him his shoes to be shined. His dinner was brought as the doctor was leaving, and he ate with much relish. His dinner consisted of a pound of broiled steak, dish of fried potatoes, four slices of toast and a quart of coffee.

Dr. Hicks when he came out of the cell said: "The prisoner had not the slightest fear. We have had a pleasant religious talk. He feels now his preparation is completed and he is ready for the last formality. He commits his soul to God with the utmost confidence. I think he will show emotion because the nervous strain is so great."

Nobody, Dr. Hicks said, had seen the prisoner at that time except himself and jail officers.

Outrageous Request.

A telegram from New York signed [illegible] was received about 10 o'clock by Dr. Hicks asking if the sender could obtain possession of Guiteau's body to exhibit it for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association. Dr. Hicks paid no attention to the message.

The Order of Procession.

The order of procession at the scaffold as arranged upon this morning is as follows: Warden Crocker and his officers will appear first, followed by Dr. Hicks. [illegible] will come the prisoner [illegible] the two guards, Coleman and Woodward. [illegible] them will walk James Hudson and [illegible] the latter at the rear of the warden.

About 11:45 preparations began to be made for the execution. [illegible] a detachment of artillery was [illegible] the rotunda [illegible] muskets to parade rest. At that [illegible] people were in the rotunda. Dr. Hicks was in the prisoner's cell in prayer.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—[illegible]

At daylight [illegible] the turbid waters [illegible] The assassin had slept but little during the night. [illegible] A. M. he dozed at brief intervals [illegible] he paced back and forth within the limits of his cell like a tiger in a cage. He frequently tossed his hands forward with an expression of vehement rage, and snarled as [illegible] while playing with a cat. His eyes glowed with excitement and they [illegible] His fingers worked convulsively as he placed them upon the bars and [illegible] President Arthur, Justice Bradley, Warden Crocker, District Attorney Corkhill and other officials who have been identified with his prosecution and imprisonment. He called upon Almighty God to curse and ruin them and he was so violent in his expressions of rage that we had to leave the corridor. At [illegible] breakfast. He started in with an appearance of [illegible] appetite but it was evident he was eating [illegible] swallowing a few mouthfuls he dropped his knife and fork [illegible] his meal. He vainly essayed in a moment after to complete his repast but could [illegible] at the things on the table [illegible] He jumped up from the table and then proposed to take his usual morning walk but the deputy warden at first refused to permit him to do so. This threw him into another paroxysm of rage and he became very violent and launched forth into a tirade against the jail officials. At length the warden allowed him to take his walk. He strode up and down for a few minutes and tiring of it [illegible] his cell. There he sat [illegible] writing, and had another visit from Dr. Hicks. At [illegible] he took his bath and dressed himself for the execution. Dr. Hicks after his visit said that when he first saw Guiteau the latter was [illegible] sustained by his idea of inspiration. When he first entered the cell the assassin [illegible] by saying that he [illegible] Yesterday afternoon prior to Mrs. Scoville's visit to the jail, she sent him a bouquet which [illegible] the knowledge of the warden or his deputy was carried into the cell. Deputy Warden Rush passed through the corridor soon afterwards and noticing the bouquet asked who had given it to him. "My sister," [illegible] replied the assassin. The warden was about to pass on when he [illegible] the bouquet was worthy of examination and he took it from the cell. It was handed to Dr. McWilliams, the jail physician, who carefully examined the flowers [illegible] had been drugged [illegible] impregnated with some poison. He took the bouquet to a chemist for analysis, and at this writing it has not been returned to jail. Before 10 o'clock crowds had begun to assemble before the jail. Enterprising venders of lemonade, peanuts and cakes set up their booths under the shade of the trees and did a thriving business with the hot and thirsty crowd. The roads leading to the prison were thronged with stragglers of all ages, sex and conditions. One old cripple whose legs had been amputated below the knees hobbled along on a pair of wooden pegs. Colored men and women composed the greater part of the spectators and as the space in front of the jail was gradually filled the [illegible] placed themselves on the sandy hills fronting the jail and enduring the excessive heat prepared to wait until the announcement of the hanging should be made public.

Guiteau showed great nervousness and appeared greatly startled when he heard the rattle of muskets on the stone floor of the rotunda and from that moment Guiteau appeared thoroughly overcome with emotion, wept freely and seemed to be in great anguish.

The scene in the rotunda while waiting for the prisoner was one long to be remembered. Soldiers were drawn up on one side and a long line of spectators facing them on the other. It was understood that Guiteau was very much depressed and it was expected that his passage to the gallows would present a very distressing sight. Every movement of the officers about the jail door was watched with eager attention. After the death warrant was read by the warden the prisoner became much impressed and turning away began to brush his hair. At 12 [illegible] a loud steam whistle was blown at the workhouse which is near the jail. This whistle usually blows at 12 o'clock and by it Guiteau was in the habit of gauging time. The delay to-day was by special arrangement, so that its startling summons might not come before the officers were ready. Two minutes later the iron gate at the end of the corridor clicked and then Warden Crocker made his appearance and a moment later the familiar face of Guiteau was seen. His face was pallid and muscles about the mouth moved nervously, but other than this there was no sign of faltering. The procession moved quickly to the scaffold and Guiteau ascended the somewhat steep steps with as much steadiness as could be expected from a man whose arms were tightly pinioned. At the last step he faltered for a moment and was assisted by officers who walked upon either side. Upon reaching the platform Guiteau was placed immediately behind the drop facing the front of the scaffold. Capt. Coleman stood upon his right, Robert Strong upon his left and Woodward directly behind him. Jones took a position on the north side near the upright of the beam and Warden Crocker took his position at the southeast corner of the structure. There was a slight delay while spectators were pushing and jostling through the door leading from the rotunda to the corridor at the lower end of which the gallows was placed and Guiteau meanwhile gazed upon the crowd, looked up in the beam over his head and quietly made a survey of all the dread paraphernalia. As soon as the crowd gained access General Crocker waved to them to uncover and all heads were bared. Dr. Hicks then prayed in these words:

"Father, out of the depths we cry to thee. Hear our supplication for the sake of Jesus Christ the Savior, who made full propitiation for us. Behold this thy servant. We humbly pray thou will deliver him at this supreme moment of his life. Let thy light be cast upon him [illegible] his person. May he appear before you absolved by thy great mercy. From blood guiltiness deliver him and us. Christ have mercy on us. Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world have mercy on us. Amen, amen."

During the prayer Guiteau stood with bowed head. At its conclusion Dr. Hicks opened the bible and Guiteau in a firm tone said: "I will read a selection from the 10th chapter of Matthew from the 28th to the 41st verses inclusive." He then read in a clear strong voice and with good intonation, showing little if any nervousness. Dr. Hicks then produced the manuscript which was prepared by the prisoner this morning and held it before him while Guiteau read. While Dr. Hicks was arranging the manuscript Guiteau exhibited slight nervousness and moved several times from one foot to the other. He soon recovered his composure and looked over the sea of upturned faces.

"I am now going to read to you my last dying prayer." He then read in a loud tone and with distinct and deliberate emphasis the following:

MY DYING PRAYER ON THE GALLOWS.

"Father, now I go to Thee and the Saviour. I have finished the work thou gavest me to do, and I am only too happy to go to Thee. The world does not appreciate my mission, but Thou knowest it. Thou knowest Thou didst inspire Garfield's removal, and only good has come from it. This is the best evidence that the inspiration came from Thee and I have set it forth in my book that all men may know that Thou, Father, didst the act for which I am murdered. This government and nation by this act I know will incur the eternal enmity [illegible] as did the Jews by killing my man, my Savior. The retribution in that case came quick and sharp and I know the Divine law of retribution will strike this nation and my murderers in the same way. The diabolical spirit of this nation, its government and the newspapers toward me will justify [illegible] in cursing them and I know that the Divine law of retribution is inexorable. I therefore predict this nation will go down in blood and my murderers from the executive to hangman will go to hell. Thy laws are inexorable. Oh! Thou Supreme Judge. Woe unto the men that violate Thy laws. Only weeping and gnashing of teeth awaits them. The American press has a large bill to settle with thee, righteous Father, for their vindictiveness in this matter. Nothing but blood will satisfy them and now my blood be on them and this nation and its officials. Arthur the president is a coward and an ingrate. His ingratitude to the man that made him and saved his party and land from overthrow has no parallel in history. But Thou, righteous Father, will judge him. Father, Thou knowest me but the world hath not known me, and now I go to Thee and the Saviour without the slightest ill will toward a human being. Farewell, ye men of earth."

At several points he paused and endeavored to impart increased emphasis to his words by the peculiar [illegible] so often observed during his trial when he was excited [illegible] said or done. This was peculiarly noticeable when he alluded to President Arthur and when he declared that this nation would go down in blood. When he had finished reading his prayer he again [illegible] I am going to read [illegible] verses [illegible] style.

I am going to the Lordy,
I am so glad,
I am going to the Lordy,
I am so glad.

[illegible]

Glory, hallelujah!
[illegible]

I wonder what I will do when I get to the Lordy,
I guess that I will weep no more when I get to the Lord.
Glory, hallelujah!

[illegible] attendants then pinioned his legs and carefully adjusted the noose. Mr. Strong [illegible] the black cap [illegible] Instantly the trap was sprung. [illegible] the body turned partly around but there was not the slightest perceptible motion of the limbs. [illegible] a yell was sent up by the crowd [illegible] This was received outside by the thousands [illegible] a general hurrah [illegible]

It is at least forty [illegible] after the drop fell [illegible] It was lowered [illegible] examined by physicians. There was found a [illegible] of the heart for fully 14 minutes and the pulse fluttered five minutes longer. When the body had hung with feet just touching the ground for half an hour it was lowered into a coffin which was lying for it under the scaffold.

Physicians decided the neck had been broken. When the body was [illegible] the black cap was removed and the face exposed. [illegible] After the [illegible] Warden Crocker [illegible] and addressing the crowd [illegible] who desired could view the body. [illegible] the scaffold and viewed the remains. [illegible] John W. Guiteau [illegible] As the [illegible] just within the line of officers at the foot of the steps. When Hicks was given [illegible] was filled with people who curiously examined every part of it.

At 1:30 P. M. the coffin was put in [illegible] and the body borne to the jail chapel where physicians who were to make the autopsy were assembled. After the body was taken to the chapel [illegible] Mrs. Scoville view it.

Guiteau just before the trap was sprung dropped a paper from his hand. This paper was given him by Warden Crocker to be dropped by the condemned man as a signal that he was ready.

John W. Guiteau said to a reporter just after the execution that he was glad it was over.

"What will be done with the remains?" asked the reporter.

"We will bury him here in the jail, where he will be safe," said Mr. Guiteau. "He will not be a curiosity [illegible] jail."

ONE HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED AND WOUNDED BY THE WRECK.

General Grant, John T. Raymond, the Actor, Jas. Brooks, the Theater Manager, Robert B. Minturn, Arthur B. Sewall and several other Prominent Men Injured.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.

NEW YORK, June 30.—The express train leaving Long Branch yesterday, on the Central New Jersey met with a terrible accident while crossing a bridge over a branch of Shrewsbury river near Little Silver station. The accident was caused by rails spreading. Six cars, four ordinary passenger and two smoking, and parlor cars, left the rails and ran over ties of a bridge, tearing them to flinders. The cars kept on the bridge until the train was half way across when 4 passenger coaches and the smoking car went over into the water with a terrible crash. The cars laid on their sides in about four feet of water. The scene that followed beggars description.

An unknown man from Orange has been taken out dead. The cars were filled with passengers and the number of injured is as taken [illegible] there were nearly [illegible] hundred hurt.

[illegible] of Jewett, Demorest & Co. of New York was injured on the skull and will die. W. R. Garrison, son of [illegible] Chas. R. Garrison, was terribly injured in the head. Chas. M. Woodruff of New York and J. Mitchell of Scranton are also seriously hurt.

It is impossible to give names. Physicians and the neighboring towns have been summoned.

Chas. R. Foster, fireman of the engine, pulled ex-President Grant out of the smoking car. Grant was slightly injured. Robert Robinson, an iron merchant of New York, was injured fatally. A man named [illegible] of Branchport was crushed terribly. Jas. Brooks of the firm of Brooks & Dickson, theater manager, had his collar bone broken. M. H. Brown and J. J. Brown, superintendent of the Erie road, received a blow on the head and back and was badly injured. [illegible] Fox of [illegible] the leader [illegible] Jas. McEvoy of 102 Broadway, N. Y., was so badly crushed that he cannot recover.

Another dead man has been identified as Jas. T. Bradley, produce dealer, of New York. G. W. Dimorest is dead. President Gallaway of the Elevated railroad is slightly injured. R. Garrison has been unconscious since the accident, suffering from concussion of the brain. He is at Hollywood Park residence of John Hoey.

Annie Irwin of Brooklyn was seriously hurt, and [illegible] Wm. A. McCall [illegible] frightfully cut. Wm. Woodruff and [illegible] nearly dead.

John T. Raymond, the actor, had his collar bone broken and was otherwise severely hurt. Fox, his father in law, was badly hurt.

The cause of the disaster was moving the track for the Monmouth park races. The switch was not properly spiked and spread when the wheels struck it. It was a case of inexcusable carelessness on the part of those intrusted with the task of altering the track.

Mr. Garrison has both legs broken besides his other injuries.

E. J. Bradley, picked up dead, lived at 110 East 72[illegible] street, New York, and was living for the summer at Ocean Beach. [illegible] W. Demorest, provision dealer of Reade street, New York, died soon after the accident. Wm. R. Garrison, son of Commodore [illegible] Garrison, is at the point of death. There is said to be a number of passengers missing but their names are not reported. Railroad men who visited the wreck blamed the management of the New York and Long Branch railroad for not placing guard or safety rails over each side of the track over the bridge and some say the accident would have been nothing but derailment if a safety rail had been used.

Chas. M. Woodruff of Newark and James L. Mallory, banker of New York, are both dead. Ex-President Grant had his knee slightly bruised.

The following persons are slightly cut and bruised: J. A. Page, William Fowler, C. H. Fuchs, F. H. Hall, F. D. Webb, S. W. Lehman, Mrs. Chas. Newkirk, R. M. Gall, Wm. S. R. Long, G. G. Scofield, D. Lord Salisbury's Objections.

LONDON, June 30.—At the Egyptian meeting, Lord Salisbury in supporting the first resolution, said he quite agreed with the sentiment that the government be turned out and he would be willing on all proper occasions to take steps to that end. The assurances of the government were little consistent with the honor of the empire but his object at present was to urge the opinion of the country to guide it at the moment of great danger. He reviewed the policy of the government, pointing out the way in which they had suffered their demands to be disregarded and declared unless they removed Arabi Pasha their whole position in the east would be jeopardized and England lose her ancient reputation in the east. Northcote supported the second resolution and both were carried.

A Radical Sentiment.

The Marquis of Blandford, son and heir of the Duke of Marlborough, writes to the New York Herald: "The slaveholding aristocracy of the south plotted in the struggle to destroy American unity. Would that the Anglo-Irish landed class had shared their fate. Then would the empire have been relieved of a dangerous canker which has steadily been eating its way into its vitals."

IDAHO.

Hailey Townsite Sold.

HAILEY, June 25.—The Hailey Townsite Company have sold out all their property to the Idaho and Oregon Land Improvement Company, a corporation which is closely allied to the Union Pacific railroad. The new owners of the townsite have had agents here for two weeks past purchasing all real estate offered for sale in and around the town and have thus invested over $100,000. The new company have positive assurance from the Union Pacific Railroad Company that the Wood river branch of the Oregon Short Line would not be built above Hailey for at least 2 years after it reaches that point. The railroad is expected to be completed here by the 1st of November of this year. Many eastern capitalists are here looking into mining properties with the view of purchasing. Very few western moneyed men have come here yet. They seem to know nothing of the great advantages which this country offers for good investments.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1882.

THE BOURBON STILL LIVES.

The dismissal from the army of Lieutenant Flipper, a negro, on account of irregular use of public money, is made the occasion of much talk which would have been more timely and less strikingly in bad taste twenty or thirty years ago. The paper which is considered the representative national organ of the democratic party says editorially: "The criticisms occasionally passed upon our fellow-citizens of African descent—that they will lie and they will steal—seem to be verified by the history of the colored cadets." The records of various courts-martial for a few years past show also that there have been white officers who were found guilty of the same offenses, and the general imputation of these crimes is as insulting to one race as the other. To slander the whole class because of the failing of one or two of its members is a proceeding which would not have occurred even to a democrat unless the negro was to be made the target for abuse. The same paper says: "It is to be hoped that any member of congress who may be inclined to appoint a negro to a cadetship hereafter will reflect upon the experience hitherto undergone by colored cadets, which indicates that to appoint a negro to a cadetship is a cruelty to him and an injury to the service." That such an appointment is a cruelty to the colored cadet is undoubtedly a fact; but lovers of fair play and haters of race prejudice degenerated into rowdyism, have an idea that this cruelty could be removed by improvements in the discipline of the military academy. There has been from the beginning of the Whittaker trouble, a great deal of violent criticism of the West Point authorities, much of which was unjust, and was therefore condemned by temperate republicans. There has also been much misplaced sympathy wasted upon Flipper, who was clearly convicted of a crime which called for his dismissal. But the most radical "black republican" never uttered anything so malignantly unjust as this suggestion of the democratic press. Because two negroes are condemned, after suffering ignominy and ostracism on account of their color, which partially explains if it does not palliate their faults, negroes are to be debarred from entering a service where they have been conspicuous for gallant behavior, and to be denied admission to an institution which is supported by the nation and must be free to all deserving citizens. The enthusiastic defenders of the negro are fair-minded judges when compared with his bigoted and slanderous assailants. It is evident that beneath the thin veneer of a tacit acceptance of the results of the war, the Bourbon cherishes his old sentiments toward the "nigger," and that to him civil equality is still a myth.

BILLS AFFECTING IMMIGRATION.

Several fair and important measures affecting immigration from foreign countries are now before congress. One of them which has just passed both houses is designed to correct the abuses of the steerage in trans-Atlantic steamers, of which we recently gave outrageous instances. Men, women and children have been treated more like brutes than human beings by the steamship companies which transport them to this country. They have been crowded into low, narrow, noisome quarters without the slightest regard to health, comfort or morals. The bill imposes stringent regulations as to space, ventilation, food, medical attendance, and the separation of sexes, and is the result of special investigation of prevailing hardships. A separate compartment is demanded for unmarried female passengers, and other requirements are made which common decency ought to prompt the steamship companies to comply with. The penalty of $50 per passenger for the violation of the government rules is enough to guarantee the obedience of the companies if the inspection be strict and honest.

Another bill which has been passed by the house, and in which the senate ought to concur, fixes a charge of 50 cents for each passenger not a citizen of the United States who is brought from any foreign port, which is intended to defray the expenses of taking proper care of the immigrants after they are landed. It may be true that the people of New York can well afford to maintain Castle Garden, because the enormous immigration, first and last, pays them well; but, if they decline to do so, their refusal does not justify the American government in leaving the mass of immigrants, ignorant of the language and customs of the country, to the mercy of the land sharks who lay in wait for them upon their arrival. It is proper that the companies which bring them into the country should be made to contribute to their safe bestowal. This same bill furnishes the necessary authority for shipping back to the country from which they come, the convicts, idiots, lunatics and other helpless or undesirable persons.

The system of regulating immigration will not be complete, however, until congress shall have added to these bills another requiring from every immigrant a certificate of successful vaccination, or, in lieu thereof, provides for their detention in quarantine at the expense of the steamship company for a sufficient time to secure successful vaccination. There is no longer the slightest doubt that smallpox is kept alive in this country by the importation of the germs of disease from European communities where vaccination is regarded with superstitious disfavor, and that universal vaccination will eradicate the foul disease if the importation thereof can be shut off. The almost annual yellow fever epidemic in the south is due oftener to importation of the disease than to other causes, the telegraph only yesterday furnishing an instance. An intelligent congress ought to be able to convince itself of this fact, and in such case there can be no excuse for a failure to provide the proper remedy.

There is no occasion for apprehending from these various restrictions any material reduction in the tide of immigration. If such should prove to be the result the country could stand it. The people of the United States will certainly be the gainers to the extent that confirmed paupers, idiots, imbeciles and diseased persons shall be prohibited from landing on our shores to swell the number of those who live upon charity and who spread disease. Indeed, there could be a great reduction in the number of able-bodied men at this time without injury to the country, since flagging industries, suspended enterprises, striking cohorts, and the increase in the cost of living have combined to make further accessions to the laboring classes of doubtful expediency.

There is much loose talk just now about "war between labor and capital." If there is any such war it is, as Mr. Lincoln said of the rebellion, an artificial war. Between labor and capital there is no natural hostility. Their interests are mutual, and neither will suffer or be benefited without corresponding advantage or disadvantage to the other. A strike is a symptom of disease; it is not a natural symptom. Capitalists may be to blame for it, but capital is not. In most cases, demagogy and laziness are to blame. There is a set of professional loafers abroad in the land whose business it is to foment labor discontents, and prevent honest men from working. When these loafers succeed in getting up a disturbance, then the democratic press begins to shout that a war has broken out between labor and capital. It is usually a war between idleness and industry. Labor is capital, and every citizen who possesses it has a right to invest and use it in his own way. If he chooses not to use it all, he does a very foolish thing, just as a capitalist does when he lets his money lie idle when he might just as well make it produce an income. People may do what they will with their own, whether it be labor or money, but when they voluntarily choose to bury their treasure in the ground, they complain with an ill grace of their landlord as a hard man. It is better to be doing something than nothing; better to have a small income than none at all. Strikes cost more than they come to, and they who foment them are the enemies of labor and not its benefactors. There is a more excellent way to settle labor disputes than by the revolutionary process of strikes.

While visiting the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa., an institution similar to the one at Forest Grove, the other day, Secretary Teller remarked that so long as he should have authority, he would do all he could to help the Indian youth to a thorough education. The money which it costs to educate the Indians is insignificant in comparison with the cost of maintaining them in idleness and ignorance. But an educated Indian is by no means always a civilized one, or one who may not readopt savage habits. The innate tendencies of a race are not going to be wholly eliminated by a few years' schooling, yet the change which education usually works in the Indian mind is something remarkable, and fully justifies the belief that the schools are by far the most efficient agency that has yet been applied by the government for the reclamation of the savage. We must fight the Indian with spelling books if we are ever to have peace with him, and we must reform him intellectually and morally before we can reasonably expect him to cease being a savage and a pauper. Let congress by all means make provision for carrying out the beneficent idea of Indian education.

Alcohol paid into the British treasury in 1874 $155,000,000. In 1881 the sum was reduced to $145,000,000. These figures the Pall Mall Gazette cites from the budget, quoting Mr. Hoyle in estimating the average yearly expenditure on drink of each English man, woman and child in 1875 to have been more than $20, and in 1881 to have fallen to less than $16. The Gazette attributes this, first, to the want of money to buy liquor; secondly, to the coffee-house movement; and, thirdly, to the "Blue Ribbon" and religious temperance societies, notably those supported by the Catholic clergy, and the "Salvation Army." The effect of this diminution in the use of stimulants is shown in the immediate increase in the amount of money deposited in the savings banks. In 1880 the working classes deposited $285,000,000; in 1881 there were deposits amounting to $225,000,000 in the old savings banks, and in the postal savings banks, just established, over $185,000,000. All these savings, however, the Gazette adds significantly, do not yet amount to 10 per cent. of the money spent in liquor.

The interest on the public debt of the United States for the next fiscal year will certainly not exceed seventy-five millions of dollars. The payment on account of pensions during the same period will not be less than one hundred millions of dollars. An appropriation for that amount passed the house without objection or comment; and any deficiency which is likely to accrue from unforeseen demands on the pension fund will undoubtedly be passed with equal unanimity. There was once before a time within the memory of men still living when the annual charge for pensions exceeded that required to pay the interest on the national debt, and that was when the pension appropriation amounted to eighteen hundred thousand dollars, while the debt was but eight hundred thousand. The lifetime of a generation covers marvelous changes in the financial history of the American people, but develops changes more marvelous still in their way of looking at the responsibility of their representatives for the general conduct of legislation.

It is stated as a fact that the cancer of which Senator Ben Hill is dying was developed by the poisonous nicotine of a cigar being absorbed by a tiny blister on his tongue. Knowledge of this fact may not materially increase the number of smokers, but it will perhaps be the means of starting a boom in cigar holders.

Gen. Rosecrans' plan of raising a democratic campaign fund by ten-cent subscriptions, after the style adopted by those who raised a fund for "Betty and the Baby," doesn't appear to have met the approval of his colleagues on the congressional campaign committee.

DROWNING OF WILLIE BEAVEY.—Thursday afternoon, while Willie Beavey, formerly of East Portland, was bathing with a companion in the Yamhill river at McMinnville, he was caught by a strong current, drawn under and drowned. His companion, also of the same age as Willie, eleven years, became frightened, ran into town, giving an alarm. Men hurried to the river, and after an hour succeeded in recovering the body. Dr. Angus tried with electricity and all other remedies at hand to restore life, but without avail. Willie was a member of the talented Beavey family of four children, known as Little Dot, and will be remembered in this city as "Dick Deadeye" in the juvenile "Pinafore" given at New Market in May, 1880. He was an only son. Five weeks ago he was baptized into the Catholic church by Father J. S. White. The funeral services took place at McMinnville yesterday morning, and the body was brought to this city in the afternoon and buried in St. Mary's cemetery.

NAVIGATING THE COWLITZ.—The Cowlitz river has been navigated for the first time above Toledo, W. T., the present head of navigation. Last Tuesday, the steamer Toledo, of the Portland and Cowlitz river trade went up the river 20 miles above Toledo, and the water was found to be deep enough for navigation, but some work is necessary to remove certain obstructions. This enterprise of the steamboat company will be a great benefit to the settlers of the eastern portion of Cowlitz county, in giving them an outlet, which they have not had, except by the slow and tedious wagon road. The Toledo brought down a full cargo of lumber, grain, hay, etc., and will make the same trip over in a few days.

OFFICERS OF THE TURN VEREIN.—The Portland Turn Verein held a meeting last evening at their hall, corner of Fourth and Yamhill streets for the purpose of electing officers and transacting other important business. Several changes were made in the constitution and the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, Ludwig Levy; vice president, William Wagner; recording secretary, Franz Simon; corresponding secretary, G. A. Lobsien; treasurer, E. A. Alisky; 1st leader, Charles Troeger; 2d leader, A. Neppach; 1st property man, T. Friedrichs; 2d property man, Dan Salzer; librarian, Joachim Kowall.

RED HOUSE ROBBERS.—Ed. Murray and Albert Warren, the two white boys arrested for complicity in the Red House burglary, were arraigned yesterday. Murray pleaded guilty to petit larceny and was fined $25 and costs. Warren pleaded not guilty and was put on trial. It was proved that he stood outside by an agreement with the others, to watch and give a signal if any one approached, and that he also shared in the plunder. He was adjudged guilty and fined $25 and costs. Both boys are in jail in default of payment of fines. It is understood that an appeal will be taken in the case of Warren.

ROOF MOSS CATCHES FIRE.—Yesterday at 1 o'clock Mr. Hendee, at the photograph gallery on I street near Fourth, East Portland, discovered that the roof of the building had caught fire from a burning chimney. The roof is old and covered with moss. The sparks from the burning chimney had set it on fire. Mr. Hendee at once informed Prettyman & Creitz, who turned their hose, which they have just procured, on the roof, and succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Mr. Prettyman says that if he had not turned the water on it at once, the chances are that the whole block would have been on fire.

POLICE RECORD FOR THE MONTH.—Following are the arrests for the month of June: Assault and battery, 16; larceny, 6; threatening to kill, 2; assault with a dangerous weapon, 2; contempt of court, 1; drunk, 147; defacing buildings, 2; carrying concealed weapons, 1; keeping bawdy house, 2; abusive language, 3; obstructing street, 1; disorderly conduct, 22; hawking without license, 2; cruelty to animals, 2; Riding on sidewalk, 1; driving over hose, 2; destroying property, 1; insane persons, 2; vagrants, 1; deserters, 2; prisoners en route, 9; total, 229. Amount of fines, $710.

MOUNTAIN VIEW PARK.

A DELIGHTFULLY LOCATED SUBURB ON NEIGHBORING HILLS.

The Old Cornell Place to be Divided into Homes—Magnificent Sights—New Drive to be Opened July 4th.

To those who have ever driven over the Cornell road the wonderful beauties it presents in the way of uncultivated scenery need not be told. Few, however, of the thousands who have passed between Portland and Tualatin Plains turned from the main road to the north and viewed the panorama unfolded from the crest of the ridge. They missed the opportunity because the branch road led to private grounds and ended there. This has been changed, and within a few days Portland will have a drive presenting views unequaled in the state. A few months ago Mr. M. B. Rankin bought the Cornell and the [illegible] comprising 175 acres, which he named the "Mountain View Park," and [illegible] the construction of a road on the north side of [illegible] creek canyon.

Yesterday a representative of THE OREGONIAN, through the courtesy of Mr. Rankin, was driven to the new suburb, going out via the Cornell road and returning by way of the new roadway. The latter connects at the foot hills, just below the long bridge on the river road, and is 1,400 feet long to the turn to house, making this distance from town back a trifle over three miles, which by the old road is nearly if not quite five miles. It was surveyed and constructed under the direction of Messrs. H. W. and [illegible], engineers, and forms a most substantial road at an easy grade. In many places giant firs, [illegible] lay in the way, and the work of construction was both difficult and expensive. The new road will be thrown open to the public on the Fourth of July. A delightful trip is to start out the Cornell road, turn to the right at the first fork and continue until the sign board pointing to the house is reached. Then drive to the crest and stop. Take field glasses.

THE VIEW.

From almost any point on the crest of the ridge, in a walk of half a mile or more, looking northeast, one can see below him the peaceful Willamette; a little beyond, the lordly Columbia, and on its northern bank the beautiful town of Vancouver, every building of the entire garrison discernable through glasses; back of Vancouver, St. Helens, and back of St. Helens, Rainier. A little to the east and in full view are the town of Washougal, Lady island and Rooster Rock, the latter more than 30 miles distant; while a sweep of the horizon from north to south takes in the Cascade range with her seven snow-covered peaks and the cities of Portland, East Portland and Albina. The elevation is 1021 feet above the base of city grades, gentle breezes from the sea prevail every afternoon and the air seems as invigorating as that of Hood river, so much sought by invalids and so grateful to those with weak lungs. Returning, visitors should take the new road, making the circuit in eight miles.

The park is well watered. On the east slope there are five springs, sixty feet from the crest of the ridge, and seven springs have already been discovered on the west slope. A well fifty feet deep has just been dug on the highest point, and has fourteen feet of water. The suburb will not be divided into blocks and lots, but later in the season Mr. Rankin may dispose of several knolls, which nature laid out into sites for homes.

ADDITIONAL ROLL OF HONOR.

CRUSHED BY LOGS.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

SPOKANE FALLS, June 30.—The body of Geo. Drew came down from Coeur d'Alene this morning. A party of loggers were breaking a rollway on A. M. Cannon's drive. In starting Drew stepped on the next to the last log and gave a forward log a push, which started those behind. Being confused and stepping forward instead of backward, he fell between the logs and was crushed to death. It is said Drew was an inexperienced logger and did not heed the warning given him.

THE BARLOW ROAD OPEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

In your local items yesterday you represent, upon what you undoubtedly thought was good authority, that the Barlow road across the mountains is still blocked so as to prevent travel. Such is not the fact. Wagons have been passing over the road from both sides of the mountains for the past ten days.

All prizes will be in U. S. gold coin, to be given at [illegible] P. M. on the day of the contest.

RULES AND REGULATIONS.

1. All hose carts or carriages in the steamer contest will be required to carry 350 feet of hose on reel, with 12 men, to break coupling at the 100 feet, attach pipe and throw water.
2. Hand engine contest will be governed by the same rule as steamers, 12 men to hose carts, 20 men to brakes.
3. The 100 yards race for carriages or jumpers, 12 men, with 350 feet of hose, straight away.
4. The judges will consist of five chief engineers of different departments.
5. All contests to start from the tap of the alarm bell.

The Astorian of yesterday has the following regarding the preparations being made, and indulges a little in reminiscences of the old hand "macheen" days.

"Rescue No. 2 are fixing up their quarters in gay style for the reception of their visiting comrades on next Monday and Tuesday. The old hand engine has been brought out, and the quarters usually assigned to that antiquated piece of furniture will be made to do duty as headquarters of the commissary department during the boys' stay here.

That old engine is held in high respect, not for any special value or beauty, but like a good many other old articles in this life, "for the good it has done." It was in 1869 that our city fathers concluded that they could no longer get along with a bucket brigade, and decided to buy a hand engine. Capt. Flavel, who was in the council at the time, bought the engine in Portland, from No. 1's, and when A. B. Hallock, the engineer in charge, brought down the "machine," the whole town turned out. It was a regular holiday; Astoria wasn't quite as big in those days as it is now, and the arrival of the engine for the city was quite an event. After the usual outbursts of demonstrative welcome, it was considered in order to give the engine a "fair shake," so all hands manned the brakes, and every able-bodied man in town "bore down," to see how she worked. Water was thrown 165 feet, and it was considered that the city had well invested its $800. Two hundred feet of leather hose were purchased, but all the grease in Oregon couldn't make that hose pliable enough to be of any use. The venerable "Hunneyman tub," which was built in Boston in 1857, will be accorded a place of honor in Tuesday's procession, and though our modern steam engines, the Amoskeag and Silsby, resplendent in the sun in all the glitter of polished machinery will be the cynosure of most eyes, yet the old hand engine will be viewed with interest by many a one who grabbed her and started on a lively gallop to a midnight blaze years ago."

The excursion from Portland of Columbia engine Co. No. 3, leaves at 11 o'clock A. M., on the 3d and returns Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock. The East Portland band, under the leadership of Prof. T. Parrott, has been engaged to accompany the excursion. They will play in the grand parade and for the ball on the evening of the Fourth.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE NELLIE BOYD COMBINATION.—As predicted, this troupe have grown in favor with the theater-going public of Portland, and the audiences which have greeted them nightly have steadily increased. The play last evening was "A Celebrated Case," well known everywhere in the theatrical world as a great favorite. Miss Boyd as "Madeleine" in the prologue, and as the daughter, "Adrienne," in the play twelve years later, was at her best and in the murder scene her acting was fearfully realistic and drew forth loud applause. Mr. [illegible] as the soldier and the galley slave, "Jean Renaud," did his part with all the earnestness such a role requires. The support was good everywhere. One of the strong points of this company is that at no time is there a break in the dialogue or any need of a prompter's presence, but everything moves smoothly to the end. The matinee to-day and the play this evening are the last performances of this company in Portland. "Kathleen Mavourneen" will be given at the matinee, and "Coralie" in the evening. It will be some time before so good a stock company will be seen again, and all who have not seen Miss Nellie Boyd should not lose the present opportunity.

CALLENDER'S MINSTRELS.—Next week look out for mirth. Thirty original, genuine [illegible] colored minstrels are coming to New Market Theater. They have just closed a successful season in San Francisco and are coming [illegible] to Portland. They bring their scenery with them, and one particular [illegible] is a wagon 22 feet high, with an [illegible] on top of it. Be sure and get a back seat for the man with the biggest mouth in the world [illegible] and he has [illegible] with him. The man with [illegible] is better than Barnum's circus, and [illegible] band with the Bull accompaniment would make a dead man laugh.

FROM THE FRONT.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

CASCADE LANDING, June 27.

Miss Kettie Hallett and Master Fred Hallett are visiting their father, Supt. J. L. Hallett.

Horse thieves are growing luxuriantly about here, and horses are as carefully housed as house plants.

Arrangements for a grand dance on the 4th of July to take place on the steamer Henry Villard is in progress.

Mr. Charleton, general time keeper, and bride have returned from Portland and are nicely ensconced in their new home.

Owing to the high water, the hospital had to be moved, which was done with no little trouble. Its present site, however, is far better than the first.

Dr. Littlefield, chief surgeon of N. P. R. R., is enjoying a visit from his daughter, Miss Lizzie Littlefield and son Horace. Both are direct from Chicago.

Mr. Charles Wilcox has mysteriously disappeared. Nothing is known of his movements or motive. His wife and two children are almost distracted over the matter.

One day last week two Chinamen were killed by a slide of rocks on the grade. Their foreman, Mr. Gross, was also injured the same day by a blast of rocks which struck him on the arm.

Newt Leslie shot at a dog last week, but missed the dog and shot a forty-five calibre hole through his foot. Dr. Burton of the hospital staff is in attendance and thinks the foot will be saved.

There are now 30 patients in the hospital, all doing well. Dr. Littlefield and his assistants are untiring to make their patients comfortable. Rheumatism is very well represented, though surgical cases predominate.

August Indrus, a patient at the hospital, while standing on the river bank, suddenly got faint and fell headlong into the current. He was caught before he got far down the stream by a log. Dr. Littlefield's son Horace gave the alarm, and the man was miraculously saved.

Dr. B. F. Burton and wife are now located here with the hospital. Dr. Burton has been the assistant surgeon of Dr. Littlefield on the O. R. & N. Co's line and holds same position here. The doctor has made many friends below and is cordially greeted by old friends and patients here.

TAKING THE OATH OF OFFICE.

The Multnomah county court was in session today, presided over for the first time by Hon. L. B. Stearns, the new county judge. Ex-County Judge Stearns seated by his side to make such suggestions on routine business as his experience should dictate.

The several newly elected county officers filed their official bonds preparatory to entering upon their duties on Monday next.

Wm. R. Powell, county clerk, gives a bond for $10,000, with Byron Z. Holmes as surety.

Geo. C. Sears, as sheriff, gives a bond of $20,000, [illegible], M. F. Mulkey, A. W. Waters and J. L. Smith as sureties.

Wm. Showers, as county treasurer, has to give a bond of $50,000. His sureties are J. R. Bingham, Thos. Huntington, A. H. Burrows, [illegible], A. Doyle, B. L. Davidson, Geo. Ainslie, C. P. Bowers, Elijah Corbett, P. L. Willis and Simeon Smith.

L. H. Austin, county surveyor, gives a bond of $500, with Aaron Tichner and Peter Baker as sureties.

The office of county assessor in the ordinary course would not have been vacant at this time, as the term does not expire until March next. But George C. Sears having been promoted by the people to another office, resigned his place as county assessor yesterday, and the court appointed I. N. Sanders to fill the unexpired term of Mr. Sears. Mr. Sanders gave a bond of $5,000 with J. M. Stott, Jr., and David Powell as sureties.

All the above bonds were approved by the court and these officers have all qualified and taken the oath of office. The county clerk is not yet prepared to announce his deputies, but it is understood that a majority of the present deputies will remain.

Sheriff Sears has appointed as deputies A. W. Witherell, and T. C. Powell, a resident of East Portland. Mr. Powell is a young man and a graduate of the high school of this city and a native born Webfoot. Edward J. Doherty was appointed jailor. Mr. Doherty was born in the state of Maryland and served in the union army from the beginning to the close of the rebellion. He has had much experience in handling prisoners.

Our "Little Beauties" are made of the finest tobacco and best rice paper. At Frank M. Cohn & Co.'s, First and Alder.

All orders must be accompanied with the cash when sent to Child's Drug Store.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Eastern Oregon

The O R & N Co have removed their Pendleton office to the new [illegible]

A party of four men from Prineville caught [illegible] trout in the Des Chuttes in two days fishing

Centerville is improving rapidly. It is in the midst of the best farming region in Umatilla county

Pendleton contains four lecturers [illegible] lawyers eight doctors two regular insurance agents and two preachers

An Echo Umatilla county correspondent tells of a minister named Harris who drove a foundered horse until it gave out and then cut its throat with his pocket knife

Last fall J H Shearer who lives on the Des Chuttes, in Wasco county bought a band of cattle paying $15 per head for steers. Some days since he sold the steers at $45 per head

L S Davis of Camp Watson has been employed by Prof Marsh, of Yale to gather fossils in Eastern Oregon. He gets $175 per month for his work which is a pretty good price to pay for gathering a few old bones.

The body of Wm McBride, who was drowned in Crooked river last March was found last Thursday by a brother of deceased. The body was partly out of the water and had lodged against a drift in mid stream. At the time of the drowning a diligent search for his body was made but owing to high water and the muddy condition of the stream all efforts were unsuccessful

The yield of this year's crop in portions of Umatilla county will not be over one-half what was expected only a few weeks ago. On account of the scarcity of rain a good deal of the spring grain will have to be cut for hay. Some of the fall sown grain is burning. The summer fallow is standing the drouth splendidly. On the road from Centerville to Walla Walla the traveler sees only two beautiful fields of wheat. The balance is very much damaged by the hot rays of the sun

Mountain Sentinel: A dam across the mouth of the lake near the old Carson diggings, broke loose a few days ago and turned a head of water down Anthony creek, which made it look for a while like the "Father of Waters." Everything in its track, fences, bridges, gardens, grain, etc., were swept away or covered up with "slickens." Welch's mill-race was damaged to the amount of about $500. Several thousand dollars worth of property in North Powder was destroyed. The lake is about two miles long and half a mile wide. The dam was 300 yards long and 16 feet high

Baker City Tribune: Recently Messrs A Elliott, J. James and P D. Estes, owners of the mine known Belle of Baker, in the Sumpter mining district, and adjoining the noted Mammoth mine, bonded the same to Mr James Reilly for the sum of $10 000. As yet our mineral resources have been scarcely prospected—much less developed. The great need of our county and section is men of practical knowledge and experience, together with capital for the successful working of the same. Our mines were thought exhausted more than ten years ago, yet the annual yield is greater now than then. The Auburn canal was about that time sold for $8000 to-day the same property could not be purchased from the present owners for less than $30,000, thus illustrating that our mines are becoming more valuable as developing progresses. Mines we have of every species, among which are gold, both quartz and placer, silver, copper, antimony, plumbago and coal, and in each field we have room for experienced labor, and require capital to develop the same and enable us to work them with profit.

Western Oregon.

The M. E. church at Mt. Tabor was dedicated last Sunday, President Van Scoy, of Willamette University, preaching the dedication sermon. A sufficient amount was pledged by the audience to free the building from debt.

Silverton Appeal: W. P. Eastham, of Butte Creek, exhibits what appears to be an enormous tooth of some prehistoric animal. The tooth was composed of laminated sections about half an inch apart—17 sections in all. The tooth, if such it be, weighed 11 pounds, and was found by Mr. Eastham's son in the bed of Butte creek. The relic will be sent to Prof. Condon for inspection.

A large barn belonging to Hon. John Kelly, of Springfield, Lane county, was burned on Sunday last. Mr. Kelly and family had been to campmeeting, and about half an hour after returning the fire broke out. It was probably caused by some tramp who had been smoking there. In the building was a lot of harvesting machinery, harness, etc., which was all destroyed. The loss amounts to $5000, probably insured.

Rev. Neill Johnson, of McMinnville, was severely hurt last Monday by a blow from his horse, which he was trying to hold while it was raging with fright at a passing threshing engine. The blow took effect in the old gentleman's breast, felling him senseless to the ground, from whence he was carried into his dwelling, with blood issuing from his mouth and nostrils, and apparently quite dangerously injured. Later developments proved, however, that although severely shocked his wound was not serious, and he was soon about again as usual.

Washington Territory.

A number of new school houses will be built in the country districts of Clarke county this season

The pork crop of Clarke county this fall and next spring promises to be larger than ever before known.

The Vancouver flouring mills are being thoroughly repaired, and some new machinery is being put in while lying idle from high water.

It is reported that two Clarke county miners on one of the tributaries of Lewis river have struck a quartz ledge which assays $80 to the ton, gold.

The new barrel factory shed, 300 feet in length, is to be roofed over with vaneering cut from cottonwood logs by the new barrel and box machinery.

The White river hop crop promises splendidly. Fruit has not been injured by frosts, and apples, plums and pears promise abundantly. There will be an abundance of small fruit in that section.

The barrel factory at Seattle is running at the top of its capacity, and turning out between 2000 and 3000 barrels daily. About 90 men and boys are worked and some of them are putting in long hours, working after supper.

The Methodist society will soon build a new church in Vancouver. It will be 30x50 feet, with a wing on the right, 20x30 feet, which will be occupied as a class room. The building will be ornamented with a handsome tower 85 feet high from the floor. The walls will be built of brick and the roof will be shingled. The seating capacity will be about 400

Dr. Blalock is cutting his barley on his farm two miles west of Walla Walla. He will commence threshing in a week or ten days. This is considerably earlier than grain usually ripens here. He will also commence in a couple of weeks to harvest the crop on what is known as the "big ranch." The machinery is already set up and in working order.

The branch of the Mill Creek Flume and Manufacturing company's railroad running to Dixie, is now being pushed as rapidly as possible. The grading will be finished in about three weeks. They have already begun to lay the track at the point of intersection with the Mill Creek road, six and a half miles above Walla Walla. About a half mile is now ready for use. The company have about ten thousand ties at the dump ready for use, and the balance are cut at the mill.

A Mail Robber's Story.

Philadelphia Press.

With heavy gyves clanking in dull, metalic ring at each movement, Henry W. Burton, confessed murderer and mail robber, sat wearily on the bench in a cell in the Central station, where he was brought from the prison in Detroit last evening by United States Marshal Matthews, of Michigan. Burton never smoked a cigar or pipe, or used tobacco in any other form, nor has he ever taken a drink of intoxicating liquor. He never swears, and he said last evening that the sound of an oath cuts him like a knife. He was born in Texas. "My father was a ranchman," said he, "his name was White, and my right name is Samuel White. When I was thirteen years of age my father was shot by James Rown in a quarrell. It was when I was twenty-one years of age that I met Rown for the first time. It was in a camp in Rockdale county, Texas. I was told who he was. Stepping in front of him I exclaimed, 'you are my father's murderer.' and before he had time to draw a pistol, I shot him through the heart. I was arrested afterward for the offense, and served a short term of imprisonment. After my discharge I began my career as a mail robber, or train agent, I worked without any assistance whatever; always alone. In April 1877, I stopped a mail-express in Rockdale county, Texas. There were fourteen passengers in the stage. You would hardly think it possible that one man could intimidate so many, but I erected dummies that in the dark looked like men surrounding the vehicle. Then I made the passengers step out of the coach, one by one, after first attending to the driver and the guard by crippling them with a shot apiece from my revolver. As the passengers alighted I threw black hoods over their eyes and fastened their hands behind their backs. I got $4,000 from this haul, but was arrested soon after, and sentenced to imprisonment for life. I was pardoned through the influence of friends [illegible]

"I went to Colorado. I cannot tell how it was, but after drifting about for a time I returned to my old pursuits. One dark night about a year ago I learned that the stage on the road between Dreadnought and Aransoa, in Colorado, was full of passengers and carried a rich mail. I erected several canvas tents and built dummies looking like men on both sides of the road with two poles, fastened fork-wise. Shortly after midnight the vehicle came dashing along the road. The horses caught on the stakes and rolled to the ground. One by one I ordered the driver and the passengers to alight. There were fourteen passengers, any one of whom could have knocked me down for I am a cripple remember, but out they came as gentle as lambs, looked at my dummy men and trembled with fear. After my trial in the September term of court, 1881 in Colorado, I was being taken from Chicago to Detroit when I disarmed the sheriff and his two deputies who had me in custody. This was in the cars. I had the sheriff's revolver pointed at his head. In an instant more I would have blown his brains out, but a passenger Miss Alice Smith a lady whom I had never seen before, and whom I had never met since, threw herself upon me, begging for the sheriff's life. I think I am too tender hearted. Escape was open to me but Miss Smith called out 'Think of the man's wife and children.' Without a word I handed the revolver back to the sheriff and submitted without a sound of complaint to having shackles placed upon my hands and feet

Haunted Me.

A working man says: "Debt poverty and suffering haunted me for years caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did no good. I was completely discouraged until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use and in one month we were all well and none of us have been sick a day since and I want to say to all poor men you can keep your family well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost."—Christian Advocate

NEW CHINESE BILL.

THE INDIANS AND THE CHINESE. ARE THEY THE SAME RACE OF PEOPLE?

Some Surprising Historical Proofs of a New Theory

There has recently been [illegible] the [illegible] relation [illegible] the native races [illegible] that may have [illegible] the [illegible] light [illegible] question [illegible] that is—the [illegible] the aborigines of America [illegible] who have been the [illegible] white race ever since the landing of Christopher Columbus in 1492. Lately the people [illegible] have had their thoughts [illegible] toward another race [illegible] history [illegible] habits have [illegible] the theme of a warm and earnest discussion in both branches of the national Congress. There can be no doubt that Congress and the President ought to have heeded the unanimous voice of the people of this coast [illegible] that came from the press as well as from the rostrum, the workshop and the farm. But it is not for the purpose of discussing "The Chinese Question" in this form that we have commenced this article, but to put forth the theory that the two races [illegible] viz the Indian and the Chinese have the same origin. Some time since the writer of this article had an interview with the Rev Josiah L Parrish now of Salem. Mr Parrish is one of the oldest living of pioneer Methodist missionaries [illegible] out from the east to the Oregon wilds to teach the Indians the one true God. Mr Parrish early acquired their language and has been studying their habits for forty years. For a long time he was the Indian agent of the U S government and acted as interpreter and negotiator for the government in many treaties made with the Indians. Mr Parrish most emphatically believes in the theory that the Indians of North America were originally Asiatics. His idea is, that they not only came across the frozen sea at Behrings straits in the winter but that many Chinamen voyagers on the ocean in junks were driven out of their course by storms and finally in their efforts to return home wandered on the trackless ocean to the Oregon and Washington coast. The spirit of wild venture or the great desire for discovery may have led some of these bolder Celestials to fit out expeditions for the express purpose of seeking the unknown shore stretching beyond their vast sea. Once reaching these shores the unexpectedly great distance deterred them from ever attempting to return. More likely than this their weak and frail crafts were dashed to pieces in the angry waves of our coast. Mr Parrish says the old wrecks of Chinese junks were seen on our coast that by their appearance must have been thousands of years old when first discovered by white men. Beeswax in large quantities, and other imperishable articles have been found in the imbedded sands of the coast a portion of the cargo of some of the castaway junks. Mr Parrish exhibited to us while on our visit to him several baskets, hats and other articles worked in grasses and straw by the Indian women of the Chinook tribe, and then placed by their side similar articles wrought by the Chinese and we were astonished at the similarity—we may almost say identity of texture figures and make up of these articles—the one produced in China and the other in Oregon. Any one seeing them would decide at once that they were all the work of the same race of people. The two races are enough alike physiognomically to claim the same origin. There is no more difference than we would naturally expect between the people of the same race who reside in a densely populated country and those who have lived the wild nomadic life of the American savage. This is a theory that will bear investigation. There is one other discovery that has recently been made with regard to these two races. There is an old Indian named Thos McKay or as he proudly calls himself, "Wyanashet," the chief of the Klickitats. The old man is supposed to be over one hundred years old. He is now living on the Tillamook hills, at the head of the Nestucca river. He hunts deer in the season and occasionally comes down to the "settlements" to sell his deer skins and fresh venison and to beg a little provisions, including whisky and tobacco, to take his lonely cabin in the hills. One day Old Wyanashet came to the town of McMinnville, all crippled up with the rheumatism. It was a terrible sight to see the once powerful leader of the great tribe so broken down that he could scarcely hobble on two canes. Some kind hearted white man gave him a bottle of the Great German Remedy, St Jacobs Oil. After a good deal of persuasion and explanation, the old chief accepted the medicine, and applied it to his old crippled limbs and in three weeks "McKay" came down from the mountains with all the vigor of renewed youth. Exclaiming, "Hy, as close, Hyu muck-a-muck, white man's medicine heap good, he made an old fashioned war dance with the magic bottle of St Jacobs Oil in his hand. We learn that at some of the reservations the Oil is used with wonderful efficacy. Now comes the other race. Mow Lee, who runs a store on Second street was similarly used up with the rheumatism, and all efforts of the best Chinese doctors were in vain to give relief. He rushed to the drug store and asked for the best 'Mellican man heep good medicine for lame leg and lame shoulder." The druggist knowing the popularity of St. Jacobs Oil, gave him the best remedy known, and the Chinaman was soon cured. If this does not go a step farther in showing that the two races are identical, it does prove that the Great German Remedy is applicable to all nations and all races of the earth. It is good for man and it is good for beast. It is good in all climates, and relieves suffering everywhere. Like the great English government, it can be much more emphatically said of it, that the sun never sets on the dominions of its beneficence and blessings. Our druggists of Portland say that the call for this remedy is not confined to any class of people or any condition of society. The rich man in his mansion, the poor man in his hut, the merchant in his counting room and the workman at his toil, the farmer and drover—all are purchasers of the Great German Remedy. The testimonials would fill volumes. We have time to give only a few.

Mrs. Mary Lee, at No 18 Fifth street, says she uses it in her large family. One of her sisters suffered with violent pains in her feet. She was relieved at once. Capt John Malone, who lives on his farm, five miles east of Portland, was all crippled up with rheumatism. The first bottle of St Jacobs Oil helped him, the second did still better, and before he had used up half a dozen bottles the most obstinate attack he ever knew yielded completely to the remedy.

Mr. Thomas Jones, of Washington county, was taking home a bottle for his wife. On the road he was seized with a violent toothache. It was too dark to go back to Portland to have the tooth extracted. In very desperation he took out the bottle of St Jacobs Oil and applied it plentifully to the inside and outside of his mouth, using his handkerchief as a bandage. By the time he reached home, the pain was subdued and what is most remarkable, the ugly customer has never troubled him since. He says a neighbor of his had a severe attack of neuralgia, and one bottle effectually cured the aggravating pains. Mr. Jones says his wife uses it for almost all the pains flesh is heir to, and always finds relief

D S. Mooney, running on various coast and river crafts, uses it for neuralgia, and always finds relief.

Mr Peter Stanwick, of 271 Sherman street has suffered years and years with rheumatism, and tried all the known remedies, and suffered many things from many physicians, the St Jacobs Oil has cured him. And so goes the word, "all along the line." First pain, then anxiety for relief and then resort to the wonderful substance whose surprising efficacy has been so fully testified to above

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

SAN FRANCISCO [illegible]

[illegible]

From the [illegible] Jun 13th: There has been but little doing in the [illegible] market during the past week. No purchase has taken place, holders being too strong in their views to suit buyers. A few sales to brewers have been made at [illegible]. Brewers are reported to be [illegible] the [illegible] weather preventing an increased consumption of lager. They dislike the difference to the prices and that they will only buy as they need the hops to use. So that as far as they are concerned the hop trade will only revive when beer becomes active. All however acknowledge the strength of the market and do not look for lower prices this season

Advices from Waterville of June 6th state that holders of hops who were waiting [illegible] last week are no more ready to sell now that [illegible] is freely offered. One hundred bales changed hands between dealers on Saturday at [illegible] and the Hubbard lot of forty eight bales has to day been sold to a dealer at 30c. The hop vine outlook is the one theme among growers and dealers. The general testimony is that there is an unusual backwardness and unevenness in the condition of the vine many vines being more spindling than usual and the [illegible] hills reported early in the season not nursing as it was expected they might do. In the present deadlock holders of 1881 hops and dealers anxious to buy [illegible] however see the crop prospects through glasses of an entirely different color

The Madison (N Y) Observer of June 7th says: Reports from the hop sections of Central New York are quite unfavorable for the coming crop. In Lewis county the yards are in a very unpromising condition. It is stated that by count in some yards and estimates in others it is thought that about 40 per cent of the hills have been winter killed. Around Middlefield, in Otsego county, the hop vine also looks very unpromising, and some of the growers have commenced removing the poles preparatory to plowing up their yards while others are waiting to see if it will repay them for twining. The vine does not start in a healthy or natural manner but from the runners are sent out a diminutive vine decidedly weak such as may be seen in July or August at the extremity of the hill. These unfavorable reports from the hop districts have caused an advance in the price of last year's crop the sales of last week advancing to [illegible] and [illegible]. It is believed that prices will go still higher before the new crop is harvested as a scarcity of old hops is quite probable before new ones are available.

The San Francisco situation is reported on the 22d inst as follows: "During the past week there has arisen an active inquiry for all grades of hops in this market and the majority of parcels suitable for shipping have been rapidly picked up by parties acting on orders from the east and England. The rapid advance of prices both in New York and abroad consequent on the scantiness of the supply and the backwardness of the coming crop has become apparent in this market and values have advanced very materially. The stock of hops now in warehouse in this city is believed to be less than 500 bales principally Oregon and Washington territory. The stock of California hops of the crop of 1881 is believed to be nearly absorbed by brewers, who have sufficient to carry them along until the arrival of the new crop about the first of August. Reports received by dealers concerning the growing crops are very favorable. In Oregon and Washington territory a larger acreage has been planted than last year the vine is well advanced and prospects of a large yield very encouraging. Choice lots of Russian river hops have recently changed hands at 30@31½c [illegible] and Oregon and Washington territory have advanced from [illegible] within the past week
